Synaptic integration and modulation of synaptic transmission in hippocampal CA1 neurons by adenosine and adenosine receptors. In this study, we investigated the functional roles of adenosine (A) and adenosine receptors (ARs) in synaptic transmission and plasticity in the hippocampus. In hippocampal slices obtained from adult rats, the A1-AR agonist, 2-p-(2-carboxyethyl) phenethylamino-5'-N-ethylcarboxamidoadenosine (CGS21680, 1 microM), attenuated whole-cell currents during postsynaptic depolarizations evoked by synaptically-coupled Schaffer collateral stimulation. This effect was not blocked by antagonism of the A2-AR subtype of the A-ARs with CPTX. The A2A-AR agonist, 2-p-(2-carboxyethyl) phenethylamino-5'-N-ethylcarboxamidoadenosine (CGS21680, 100 nM), depolarized CA1 neurons by 5 mV, produced a current response during the postsynaptic depolarization, and enhanced synaptic transmission, as well as the frequency of spontaneous excitatory postsynaptic currents. The CGS21680-induced depolarization was completely blocked by CPTX. These results suggest that the presynaptic release of A activates A1-ARs on afferent terminals and these A1-ARs on the terminals inhibit presynaptic neurotransmitter release at Sch b7e8fdf5c8
